Date of Object	26 th Dynasty
Dating	Kitchen explains that the genealogical information is present on the coffin inscriptions (he has translated them, but not given transliterations in this publication) and mentions that there is not enough information to link this particular coffin to a well-known family (Kitchen (1990), 171). He does, however, make many remarks on similarities between coffins CG 41044, 41047, 41056 and 41068, whom some are genealogically linked to the Besenmut family and thus provide a link. Most of the similarities highlighted are text related, either similarities in errors or in text composition. He also notes the mention of these coffins by Raven (1981, 16-17) in his article.

Height of Object	189 cm
Width of Object
Thickness of Object
Background colour	Yellow
Face	Red skin with black defined eyebrows and eyes and strap for false beard. Protruding ears.
Wig	Yellow and blue striped tripartite wig. The coronet has a row of green leaves, then multi-coloured rectangles, then another row of green leaves and a final row of multi-coloured rectangles. In the middle is a standing green skinned goddess (the symbol above her head is damaged so her identity is unclear) with a blue wig, red dress and wings that are outstretched downwards with a row of yellow with blue spots then blue, green and blue plumes.
Collar	Twelve rows of vegetal motif with the last row as oval pendants.
Nut	Red skinned Nut, identified, with a blue wig, white headband, green collar and dress, crouching on a doorway. On either side of the goddess is a green ram with a red scarf, horns and a yellow double crown with a red solar disk and a wḏ3t eye above, BoD spell 85.
Central Median	In the middle is a vignette of the deceased lying on a lion bed with four canopic jars underneath. The deceased has a green face, black beard and black/blue wig, yellow shoulders and a green mummiform body. Above the deceased is a b3 , and on the left side is Isis and the right Nephthys, identified by their symbols, who both have green skin, a blue wig, red headband and dress for Isis and a yellow headband and dress for Nephthys, and their front hands raised in adoration. Down the center is seven lines of text.
Register 1	On the left of the central vignette are two smaller vignettes, the inner one of a green skinned Amset(y), identified in the text, with a blue/black wig and beard, red top and a half yellow and half blue kilt. Behind him is a green anthropomorphic jackal identified in the text as Duamutef, with a blue wig, red skin, a green top, a half yellow and half blue kilt and a green tail. Each of them is holding in his left hand a w3s scepter and in his right an ʕnh . On the right, the inner figure is a green skinned deity, the head and accompanying text are damaged and therefore unidentifiable, with traces of a yellow top, a half yellow and half blue kilt, and holding a w3s scepter in his right hand and an ʕnh in his left. The outer figure is a white anthropomorphic falcon, unidentified because of the damaged text, with a blue/black wig, red skin, green top, half yellow and half blue kilt with a w3s scepter in his right hand and an ʕnh in his left.

Register 2	On the left is a black anthropomorphic jackal, the identity is damaged due to the condition of the coffin, with a blue/black wig, red skin, green top, a half yellow and half blue kilt, a green tail and a w3s scepter in his left hand and an ʕnh in his right. On the right the condition of the coffin due to dust and varnish makes the image unclear.
Register 3	On the left is a green skinned male deity, unidentified because of the damaged condition of the text on the coffin, with a blue/black wig and beard, yellow collar, red top, a half yellow and half blue kilt, a green tail and a w3s scepter in his left hand and an ʕnh in his right. On the right is a green skinned male deity, with a large crack in the wood that is right through the vignette, making clear identification difficult. The accompanying text is also in terrible condition. Traces of a kilt and a w3s scepter are present.
Register 4	On the left is a green anthropomorphic ibis, unidentified because of the damaged condition of the text on the coffin, with a blue/black wig, red anthropomorphic skin, green top, a half yellow and half blue kilt, green tail and a w3s scepter in his left hand and an ʕnh in his right. On the right is a red skinned male deity with a blue/black wig, green top (faint trace of colour), half yellow and half blue (faint colour) kilt, green tail and a w3s scepter in his right hand and an ʕnh in his left. The accompanying text is in terrible condition.
Register 5	A wd3t eye on each side.
Feet	Image of a winged standing goddess but the damaged condition of the coffin does not allow for any identification.
Base	Palace façade.
Bottom	Undecorated.
Back	The trough sides have offering formulae. The rest is inaccessible due to the condition of the coffin.

Nut	Just below the collar is a winged solar disk.
Register 1	On the far left there is a symbol of the west then a jackal in mummiform with linen and a m3ꜥt feather. Identified as Duamutef. Then there is a falcon with a funerary cone, mummiform body with linen and a m3ꜥt feather. The identification is damaged. The following figure is a baboon with a mummiform body with linen and a m3ꜥt feather. Name is damaged. Then there is a human deity with a wig, cone and mummiform body with linen and a m3ꜥt feather. Partial name resembles Amset(y) making these four figures the four sons of Horus. Then there are two goddesses with bead net dresses, wigs and one clearly identified as Isis with her symbol and a second female without a symbol but certainly her sister Nephthys since they always come in a pair. Then there is Osiris identified by the atef crown, in a mummiform body holding a w3s scepter along with a crook and flail. Then there is a falcon deity with a mummiform body with a bead net, beard, w3s scepter and a red solar disk above his head identifying him as Ra-Harakhty. Then there is a snake with a beard, possibly Atum, before a table of offerings. On the other side there is a jackal headed anthropomorphic deity with a kilt, one arm raised with linen on it and the other hand holding that of the deceased. Then there is a depiction of a female in a long dress with a cone. Behind her is a scale. This scene depicts BoD spell 125.

Register 2	Offering formula to the deceased with her name and titles.
Register 3	The middle has a vignette of BoD spell 89 with the deceased on a lion bed wearing a wig, cone, shoulders and striped mummified body. Colours are distorted because of the layer of ash and burnt wood. Above the deceased hovers a b3 bird and below the bed there are seven canopic jars. On either side of the vignette are two falcons with outstretched wings and a red solar disk, holding m3't feathers in its talons. There is also a wd3t eye and nb beside the falcons.
Register 4	Offering formular to the deceased with her name and titles.

Side 1	Portion of inner trough of right side of coffin. Two figures, the name of the first damaged. Part of the head is damaged but is a green skinned deity with a black wig and yellow shoulders, braces and body. Identified in the text as Hapi. The other figure is a white falcon with a black wig, green and red cone, yellow shoulders and braces and a red body. Identified in the text partially by A(n)s, perhaps Amset(y) since the name behind happy resembles the ending of Duamutef, representing the sons of Horus. In front of them is a hṯp-di-nsw formula with the name of the deceased, her title and the name of her husband/betrothed.
Side 2	Portion of the outer trough of right side of coffin. The first figure is broken but the remnants are of a black anthropomorphic skinned deity with a tail, yellow outfit and black wig standing on a shrine. The broken text mentions purification so perhaps it was a scene of a deity purifying the deceased. Following this is a long inscription of twenty-eight lines including the name of the deceased and her husband/betrothed. The end of the text has a white falcon headed deity with a red wig, blue anthropomorphic skin, yellow collar, braces, top, blue belt, half yellow and half white kilt and a blue tail while holding in his right hand an ꜥnh . His left arm is raised. Above the scene is a five set of blue and yellow hkr (Aa30) ornaments with
